Two Reel Century Comedy

MAR -6 1925

With EDDIE GORDON

Smith is a strenuous student who wears out a few dictionaries each day, solving crossword puzzles. His floors, walls and ceilings are marked out for crossword puzzles. He dizzily engages in solving them to the sorrow of his sweetie. The poor girl never has a chance to talk to him and she is usually kept in the anteroom while he takes "think" or "inspiration" pills to help him do his stuff.

His dog and butler aid him, unconscious in many of his problems. While so engaged, the girl dashes into his study, seizes him by the ear and drags him out to be married. This also aids him in obtaining a much needed three letter words.

Once on the street, their problems begin again. He fishes a puzzle out of his pocket, absentmindedly walks in another direction and gets hooked to a crane. Dizzy doings follow, and he almost falls on half a dozen occasions. Restored to his dearie, she takes away the puzzle. Soon he has another. More troubles follow.

A strange girl gives him a vicious smack with her hand when he asks for a five letter word meaning kiss. A street car bumps him into a police wagon. Once in jail he corrupts the crooks and cops with the new "disease". While they are busily engaged in grabbing off words, he walks out.

His sweetie meets him. With the aid of the butler, they empty his pockets of a huge mass of puzzles and pencils. Then they handcuff him and march him away, towards the marriage altar.
